HEROINES OF HISTORY

HOW BARBARA BLAUGDONE WON THE RESPECT OF HER PERSECUTORS.

To those who have pictured a Quakeress as a demure woman who "spoke when spoken to" and let the men take the initiative in everything, "keeping silent in the house of God," Barbara Blaugdone is a revelation. She was the most daring and unafraid woman of the Quaker faith, according to history. The story of her eventful life of persecution and determination begins in 1847.

Barbara Blaugdone was born in Bristol, England, about 1600. She had always been the leader of her social set and was very wealthy. Beautiful clothes and luxurious surroundings had been her chief delight until she became a Quakeress, at 47 years of age. During the first year of her "convincement" she abstained from eating meat and drank nothing but water as a test of her endurance.

Her first persecution when she made her beliefs known, was imprisonment in a vile jail in Bristol where she was abused daily. But Barbara Blaugdone was undaunted. The minute she was free she walked from the doors of the prison and started to preach Quakerism to the first person she met. On her way to meeting a few days after a man came along and thrust a knife in her side. Her only comment as she swooned with the pain and loss of blood was:

"Sir, my soul is so in love with truth that I could this day give up my life for it."

As soon as the militant Quakeress recovered from her injuries she started again on what she believed to be her mission in life. At Marlborough, where she entered a church to speak, she was struck by a man and thrown through the door. Then she was haled before a magistrate and imprisoned.

When released at the end of six weeks of suffering Barbara Blaugdone, still determined to "do or die," started on her way again. During her wanderings she came to the home of the Earl of Bath, where during her days of wealth, she had often been received. The servant who opened the door told her that the countess was in the garden, and when she arrived at the back of the house a large dog was set upon her. It is said that the dog was stricken with an illness and went away whining.

Disappointed and footsore, the intrepid Quakeress left the earl's home, reaching the nearest town before nightfall. Here she was committed to a jail 20 miles away. Thrown among a band of bysies who had been arrested for vagrancy, she taught them, and many were converted. As a result she was taken to another room and whipped severely, then turned out into the bitter cold night. That night she slept in a pig trough.

Broken in health and nearly frozen from exposure, Barbara Blaugdone, who was then 50 years of age, returned to her home in Bristol. Here she lived to be the eldest of the Quaker pioneers, being nearly 150 years of age when she passed away. But she lived to see her people given freedom to worship in their own way in 1688, and contributed many books to literature before her death.

Tomorrow's HOROSCOPE

By Genevieve Kemble

SUNDAY AND MONDAY, NOV. 12-13.

Sunday's astrological forecast is not read as favorable to business or money, neither does it advance prospects of employment. Some recognition is imminent, but there may be danger of deception.

Those whose birthday it is have a rather doubtful forecast for business, though there may be some recognition. Beware deception and be wise in the matter of pleasure. A child born on this day will be clever, generous and proud, and have good judgment, but may be unreliable and given to pleasure.

Monday's horoscope holds conflicting testimonies. While there is promise of success in business, with gain in financial matters, yet there may be a visitation of grief, sorrow or disappointment in heart and home affairs. Changes or travel may well be deferred until a better rule of Uranus.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of financial and business success, but some problems may beset the home. Avoid change and travel. A child born on this day will be clever, industrious and successful in business, but may be less happy in heart affairs.
